

Twenty-Five Years of Rescue Work: Beulah Home, 1909-1934

The Beulah Home was a rescue home for women and girls in Minneapolis, Minnesota. It was founded in 1909 by the Reverend John H. Elliott, a Methodist minister, and his wife, Sarah. The home's mission was to provide a safe and supportive environment for women and girls who were struggling with poverty, homelessness, or other challenges.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OF RESCUE WORK: Beulah Home 1909-1934 by Deborah Alexander

★★★★☆ 4.6 out of 5

Language : English
File size : 11556 KB
Text-to-Speech : Enabled
Screen Reader : Supported
Enhanced typesetting : Enabled
Word Wise : Enabled
Print length : 62 pages
Lending : Enabled

The Beulah Home was located at 1401 Fremont Avenue North in Minneapolis. The home was a three-story brick building with a basement. The first floor housed the offices, a dining room, and a kitchen. The second floor had bedrooms for the residents, and the third floor had a chapel and a recreation room. The basement housed a laundry room, a sewing room, and a boiler room.

The Beulah Home was staffed by a superintendent, a matron, and a staff of volunteers. The superintendent was responsible for the overall operation of the home, and the matron was responsible for the care of the residents. The volunteers provided a variety of services to the residents, including tutoring, sewing, and cooking.

The Beulah Home provided a variety of services to its residents, including shelter, food, clothing, and medical care. The home also offered educational and vocational training, as well as counseling and spiritual support.

The Beulah Home was a vital resource for women and girls in Minneapolis. The home provided a safe and supportive environment for women and girls who were struggling with poverty, homelessness, or other challenges. The home also offered a variety of services that helped the residents to get back on their feet.

The Founding of the Beulah Home

The Beulah Home was founded in 1909 by the Reverend John H. Elliott and his wife, Sarah. The Elliotts were both deeply concerned about the plight of women and girls who were struggling with poverty, homelessness, and other challenges. They believed that these women and girls needed a safe and supportive environment where they could get back on their feet.

The Elliotts founded the Beulah Home with the help of a group of volunteers. The volunteers donated their time and money to help the Elliotts establish the home. The home was named after Beulah, a woman who is mentioned in the Bible as a symbol of hope and restoration.

The Early Years of the Beulah Home

The early years of the Beulah Home were difficult. The home was small and overcrowded, and the staff was underfunded. However, the Elliotts and their volunteers were determined to make the home a success. They worked tirelessly to provide a safe and supportive environment for the residents.

The Beulah Home quickly became a vital resource for women and girls in Minneapolis. The home provided shelter, food, clothing, and medical care for women and girls who were struggling with poverty, homelessness, and other challenges. The home also offered educational and vocational training, as well as counseling and spiritual support.

The Expansion of the Beulah Home

In 1914, the Beulah Home moved to a larger building at 1401 Fremont Avenue North. The new building had more space for the residents and the staff. The home also began to offer a wider range of services, including a day care center and a job training program.

The Beulah Home continued to grow and expand throughout the 1920s. In 1926, the home opened a new wing that added 20 additional beds. The home also began to offer a wider range of educational and vocational training programs.

By the end of the 1920s, the Beulah Home was one of the largest and most respected rescue homes in the United States. The home provided a safe and supportive environment for women and girls who were struggling with poverty, homelessness, and other challenges. The home also offered a wide range of services that helped the residents to get back on their feet.

The Great Depression

The Great Depression had a devastating impact on the Beulah Home. The home's funding was cut, and the number of residents declined. The staff was forced to make difficult decisions about which services to cut.

Despite the challenges, the Beulah Home remained open during the Great Depression. The staff continued to provide a safe and supportive environment for the residents, and the home continued to offer a variety of services.

The Closing of the Beulah Home

The Beulah Home closed in 1934. The home's funding had been cut, and the number of residents had declined. The staff could no longer afford to keep the home open.

The closing of the Beulah Home was a sad day for the city of Minneapolis. The home had been a vital resource for women and girls for over 25 years. The home's closing left a void in the community that was not easily filled.

The Legacy of the Beulah Home

The Beulah Home may have closed, but its legacy lives on. The home's work helped to change the lives of thousands of women and girls. The home's staff and volunteers were dedicated to providing a safe and supportive environment for the residents, and the home's services helped the residents to get back on their feet.

The Beulah Home is a reminder of the importance of providing support to women and girls who are struggling with poverty, homelessness, or other challenges. The home's legacy is a testament to the power of hope and restoration.

The Beulah Home was a rescue home for women and girls in Minneapolis, Minnesota, from 1909 to 1934. The home's mission was to provide a safe and supportive environment for women and girls who were struggling with poverty, homelessness, or other challenges. The home provided a variety of services, including shelter, food, clothing, medical care, educational and vocational training, counseling, and spiritual support.

The Beulah Home was a vital resource for women and girls in Minneapolis. The home provided a safe and supportive environment for women and girls who were struggling with poverty, homelessness, or other challenges. The home also offered a variety of services that helped the residents to get back on their feet.

The Beulah Home closed in 1934 due to lack of funding. However, the home's legacy lives on. The home's work helped to change the lives of thousands of women and girls, and the home's staff and volunteers were dedicated to providing a safe and supportive environment for the residents. The Beulah Home is a reminder of the importance of providing support to women and girls who are struggling with poverty, homelessness, or other challenges.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OF RESCUE WORK: Beulah Home 1909-1934 by Deborah Alexander

★★★★☆ 4.6 out of 5

- Language : English
- File size : 11556 KB
- Text-to-Speech : Enabled
- Screen Reader : Supported

Enhanced typesetting : Enabled
Word Wise : Enabled
Print length : 62 pages
Lending : Enabled

Paper Blood: Two of the Ink Sigil

By D.S. Otis In the world of Paper Blood, vampires and humans live side by side, but not always in peace. The vampires are a secretive and...

Starting Up: Critical Lessons from 10 New Schools

Starting a new school is a daunting task, but it can also be an incredibly rewarding one. In this article, we will examine the critical lessons learned...